The Blue Salon is a two-day symposium devoted to the state of the world's waters, with one day dedicated to fresh water and one to salt water. The Blue Salon will address some of the most pressing issues faces humanity and our planet today.

The Blue Salon brings together some of the world's leading water researchers and technology innovators together with a prestigious intersection of visionaries, diplomatic corps, policy makers, and artists with the goal of exchanging ideas and provoking thought into action. Each day will begin with expert speakers and panels laying out the critical issues. After delicious luncheon, afternoon breakouts will focus on solutions for Blue Salon participants to discuss potential applications of information learned and shared.

We look forward to learning and sharing perspectives, experiences and discovering innovative solutions for preserving the world's water systems.

The Blue Salon, a two-day symposium devoted to the state of the world's waters, is the sister event to the Green Salon series held in Washington, DC.

The Green Salon Hosts welcome people with knowledge, resources and a desire to use their influence to create positive change through exchanging ideas and provoking thought into action. We look for speakers to be solution-oriented on environmental issues of importance. The code of the Green Salon is to be a place for ideas, learning and awareness in a private setting. The Green Salon is covered by Washington Life magazine:
